McEWAN-HARTFORD—Mr. Jas. McEwan, formerly of this city, but now of St. Louis, Mo., and Miss Belle Hartford, of Shelby county, were married Tuesday morning in Louisville by Rev. J. M. Weaver. Mary Martha Saffell.

The death of this dear child at the home of her parents, on Logan street, last Monday, calls for more than a mere passing notice. Though she had seen but thirteen summers pass by, already had the graces of a lovely womanhood begun to adorn her brow. Fair and beautiful in form and feature, lithe and graceful as the young fawn, you were still more attracted, as she came and went, by the native sweetness and beauty of her soul. The brightness of her smile, the music of her voice, the gentleness of her acts, told you that here was one of the rare spirits of earth. She loved the good and hated the bad as instinctively as she breathed. Natural and human as her childhood was, heaven seemed to lie about her and the angels to be calling her. Not long could such as she be spared from the native realm. And though her going means desolation to the stricken home of which she was the light and joy, in life's early forenoon she unfolds the wings of her immortality and, like the birds of autumn, flies away.

"She is not dead—the child of our affection—

But gone into that school

Where she no longer needs our poor protection,

And Christ himself doth rule.

"Day after day we think what she is doing

In those bright realms of air;

Year after year her tender step pursuing,

Behold her grown more fair.

"Thus do we walk with her, and keep unbroken

The bond which nature gives,

Thinking that our remembrance, though unspoken,

May reach her where she lives.

"And though, at times, impetuous with emotion

And anguish long suppressed,

The swelling heart heaves moaning like the ocean,

That cannot be at rest,—

"We will be patient, and assuage the feeling

We may not wholly stay;

By silence sanctifying, not concealing,

The grief that must have way."
